

Public Health
England

Natasha Roberts

Principal Epidemiologist

Public Health England

Why be an assessor?

- Benefits to the organisation
 - More confident and motivated staff
 - Enables the practitioner to see values and the contribution they make to the local public health agenda
 - Improve self-esteem
 - Ensures that all practitioners know and work to professional standards and that these are consistent across the workforce
 - Contributes to the overall professionalism of public health
 - Ensures that Public Health is seen as a professional body
 - Ensures a wider knowledge of the broader skills within Public health

Why be an assessor? - continued

- Benefits to me as an assessor
 - Awareness of lots of good pieces of work
 - A contribution to developing the Public Health Workforce
 - Enabling people to be the best that they can be
 - Constant reminder of public health competencies
- How my role contributes
 - Health intelligence – good analytical skills
 - Supporting function those working within health Intelligence often find it difficult to bridge the gap between what they do and how these relate to the standards

Public Health
England

Summary

